JEAN R. YAWKEY

We pay tribute to the memory of Mrs. Jean R. Yawkey, chairwoman of the Board of the JRY Corporation, a general partner of the Boston Red Sox, who passed away at the age of 83 Wednesday, February 26, 1992, as a result of complications from a stroke.

The long tradition of Yawkey ownership first began when Tom Yawkey purchased the club in 1933. Mrs. Yawkey married Tom in 1944 and attended virtually every home game in Fenway Park since then. She was always involved in the operations of the club, but she made even more of an impact on the community through the millions of dollars she gave to various charities.

Mrs. Yawkey always avoided personal publicity as she went about helping others in a quiet way. She served as chairwoman of the board of the Jimmy Fund, and participated in the 1990 dedication of the Thomas A. Yawkey Research Laboratories at the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. The Jimmy Fund, which is the primary fund-raising arm of Dana-Farber, has been the official Red Sox charity since 1952.

An avid enthusiast of wildlife, Mrs. Yawkey maintained great interest in the care and maintenance of The Tom Yawkey Wildlife Center in Georgetown, SC. This 40,000-acre preserve was the former winter home of the Yawkey's and was donated to the state of South Carolina by Mr. Yawkey in 1976. The preserve is managed by the South Carolina Wildlife and Marine Resources Department, with funding from The Yawkey Foundation. Mrs. Yawkey's extensive knowledge of the environment and waterfowl permitted her to take a leading role in the oversight of the wildlife center. Mrs. Yawkey also was a strong backer of the Nature Conservancy.

The Yawkeys co-founded the Tara Hall Home For Boys, located in Georgetown, SC, in 1972. In addition to major financial support of the home and school, Mrs. Yawkey would always remember each boy at Christmas. Last fall, she sent the entire school to an Atlanta Braves' playoff game.

Since moving to Boston on a full-time basis in the 1980s, Mrs. Yawkey became involved in numerous charitable endeavors. She helped to establish the Family Inn in Brookline, a temporary home for families undergoing transplant surgery in Boston area hospitals. She was also a major donor to organizations such as the Pine Street Inn, Rosie's Place, the Boys and Girls Club of Boston, the Daniel Marr Boys and Girls Club in Dorchester, The Boston Food Bank's Second Helping Program, The Sports Museum, Massachusetts General Hospital, and the Boston Pops Orchestra, whose music she particularly appreciated.

Mrs. Yawkey also established a number of scholarships over the years to provide educational opportunities to those who otherwise could not afford to further their education.

Most of all, Mrs. Yawkey loved the game of baseball. She was a true friend to many of the players and the employees of the club. It did not matter if one swept up the park, ran the scoreboard, or made major business decisions. She always had a smile and a kind word for them. The employees of the Red Sox were family to Mrs. Yawkey.

Besides the Red Sox, Mrs. Yawkey was a big supporter of amateur baseball. She funded the 1984 United States Olympic Baseball team's visit to Fenway Park for an exhibition game against the Boston Park League. The Yawkey Baseball League and the Park League are supported on an ongoing basis by the Yawkey Foundation. The Rookie League, a program to involve inner-city youngsters at a very early age with the game of baseball, was a pet project of Mrs. Yawkey. In addition, the College Beanpot Baseball Tournament was born in 1990 with the help of Mrs. Yawkey's support.

Mrs. Yawkey was also a director of the National Baseball Hall of Fame and Museum in Cooperstown, NY, holding the distinction of being the first woman ever elected to serve on its board. In addition to her involvement as a director, Mrs. Yawkey provided leadership funding for the Hall of Fame's recent addition, the Fetzner-Yawkey Building. And, at the time of her death, she, through the Yawkey Foundation, had committed to a major expansion project of the National Baseball Hall of Fame Library.

In recent years, Mrs. Yawkey received several awards including the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce 1991 Distinguished Bostonian Award. In 1988, the New England Council of Women Professionals presented Mrs. Yawkey with the First Annual Jean R. Yawkey Award. Each year it is awarded to a woman who embodies outstanding leadership qualities and who significantly contributes to New England's community spirit.

Jean Yawkey's life was one of labor and love, and now she has passed on to join her husband, Tom, whom she deeply loved and sorely missed since his death 16 years ago. Those who mourn her passing should take heart in knowing how much she was looking forward to the reunion with her husband.

CLELL LAVERN (BUTCH) HOBSON, JR. # 17

On October 8, 1991 Hobson signed a two-year contract and became the 38th manager of the Red Sox.

1991 was Hobson's first year as a AAA manager. He joined Pawtucket Jan. 8, 1991 after spending the previous two years as manager of AA New Britain (Eastern L.). The PawSox made a dramatic turnaround under Hobson, going from last place in 1990 to first in 1991, an 18½ game improvement. As a result Hobson won Int. L. Manager-of-the-Year honors and was selected by "Baseball America" as overall minor league Manager of the Year.

Hobson juggled 41 different players (13 PawSox were called up to Boston during the season) into a 79-64 record and a first-place finish. In the process the PawSox not only set an all-time attendance record at McCoy Stadium for the 5th straight year, but also they went over 300,000 for the first time (362,342). The PawSox were swept in three playoff games by the Governor's Cup Champion Columbus Clippers.

In 1990 Hobson guided the BritSox to the final round of the Eastern L. playoffs after the club finished in 4th place during the regular season with a 72-67 mark. They then upset the league champion Albany Yankees three games to two before losing in the finals three games to none to the London Tigers. The last three falls he helped coach the Red Sox Florida Instructional League team. In five years as a minor league manager Hobson had a 349-345 .503 regular season record, including 151-131 .535 the last two years.

Butch returned to the Red Sox, where he played from 1975 through 1980, as manager of New Britain in 1989. The BritSox were 8th in his first season as manager but finished just 6½ games behind 4th place Reading with a 13-game improvement for a 60-76 record. During that winter he played 3B for the Winter Haven Super Sox in the Senior Pro League.

Hobson also played for the Angels in 1981 and the Yankees in 1982. In 1983-85 he played for the Yankees' triple A team at Columbus and was released during spring training of 1986. He sat out that year before he became manager for the Mets' Class A affiliate, Columbia, in the South Atlantic L. in 1987-88. In 1988 he guided the Mets to a 74-63 .540 record, 5th in the league. Columbia finished 2nd during the 2nd half of the season with a 36-31 mark. In 1987 the team was 64-75 .460.

Age: 40; Turns 41 Aug. 17; Born: August 17, 1951, Tuscaloosa, AL. Ht.: 6-1; Wt.: 190. Blue eyes, Gray hair. Bats and Throws: Right. Home: Aliceville, AL. Married: Krystine (Krys) Fioravanti. Children: Allene 1/24/74, Elizabeth (Libby) 8/12/77, Polly 7/20/79, Kristopher Clell (K.C.) 8/22/90.

Butch played both baseball and football at the University of Alabama. He was backup QB to Terry Davis for "Bear" Bryant's "wish-bone" offense in 1972 that culminated in the Orange Bowl vs. Nebraska for the national championship. Nebraska won the battle of the unbeaten, 38-6, but Hobson rushed 15 times for 59 yards, including a 26-yard scamper. Butch was on the varsity baseball team as a freshman, the final season for Coach Joe Sewell who was inducted into baseball's Hall of Fame in Cooperstown in 1976. Hobson did not play baseball in 1971 but became the Tide's regular 3B in 1972-73. He hit .282 in 35 games as a junior and then .317 in 36 games as a senior with 13 HR (most ever by an Alabama player at the time) and 37 RBI. Alabama finished 22-14 in 1973 and won the SEC Western Division title. They lost the playoffs two games to one to Vanderbilt for an NCAA berth.

Hobson's father, Clell, Sr., was a three-year letterman at QB at Alabama, 1950-52. Butch played football for his dad at Bessemer (Ala.) High School and was named to the All-Jefferson County team as a senior. He also played basketball and baseball for Bessemer.

Butch was the Red Sox 8th pick in the 1973 June draft. He played two games with the Red Sox at the end of 1975 then came back again June 28, 1976. That night he hit an inside-the-park HR in Fenway off Rudy May of Balt. From 1977-79 Hobson hit 75 HR and had 285 RBI. He still holds Red Sox season records for HR (30) and RBI (112) for a third baseman set in 1977 when he batted mostly ninth. In 1979 Butch slammed 28 HR and had 93 RBI. In six seasons with the Red Sox he hit .252 in 623 games with 94 HR and 358 RBI. Eight M.L. seasons produced a .248 avg. with 98 HR and 397 RBI.

THE COACHES

GARY MARTIN (GARY, MUGGSY) ALLENSON #32

Age: 37; Born: February 4, 1955, Culver City, CA. Ht.: 5-11; Wt.: 190. Blue eyes, Brown hair. Bats and Throws: Right. Home: Winter Haven, FL. Married: Dorothy Ann Keller. Children: Kelvin 5/6/86, Kody 5/31/90.

Gary returned to the Red Sox in Boston as bullpen coach after a seven-year absence. Last year he managed AA New Britain after two seasons as manager of Lynchburg (A, Carolina L.). He began managing in the minors for the Yankees at Oneonta (NYP) in 1987-88. The last three falls he helped coach the Red Sox team in the Florida Instructional League.

Allenson rejoined Boston, where he played from 1978 through 1984, when he became manager of Lynchburg. Gary led the L-Sox to the first half title in 1989, and an overall 70-66 record. Lynchburg was eliminated in the playoff semi-finals by eventual champion Prince William. He managed the Carolina L. North Division team in the All-Star game, a 2-1 loss. During the 1989-90 off-season he caught for the Winter Haven Super Sox in the Senior Pro League.

In 1988 Gary led Oneonta to the NYP title. The Yankees finished with the best record in the NYP, 48-28 .632, and first place in the McNamara Div. They beat Jamestown 2 games to none in the playoffs. In 1987 Oneonta finished 2nd, 41-34 .547, 2 ½ gms. out of first place.

Muggsy was the Red Sox 9th pick in the 1976 June draft. He helped lead Arizona State Univ. to the 1975 College World Series where he beat Texas with a home run and a game-winning single. He was named International L. MVP, and Triple A All-Star catcher, with Pawtucket in 1978 when he hit .299 with 20 HR and 76 RBI. Gary was recalled the last two weeks of 1978 but did not play. He did spend six full seasons with the Red Sox starting in 1979. In 402 games Allenson hit .225 (231-1027) with 19 HR and 128 RBI. That included two grand slam HR, in K.C. 6/13/79 and vs. Milw. 9/23/81. After the 1984 season he signed as a free agent with Toronto. He spent part of 1985 at Syracuse and played in 14 games with the Blue Jays.

ALONZA BENJAMIN (AL) BUMBRY #37

Age: 44; Turns 45 April 21; Born: April 21, 1947, Fredericksburg, VA. Ht.: 5-8; Wt.: 175. Brown eyes, Black hair. Bats: Left; Throws: Right. Home: Lutherville, MD.

Al is handling the Red Sox first base coaching duties for the fifth year. He also is in charge of the pre-game conditioning program, outfield defensive fundamentals and game positioning, and baserunning instruction. Al was promoted to the major league club in 1988 after spending two seasons as the organization's minor league outfield and baserunning coach. He has been active in area youth clinics and visits neighboring playgrounds as part of the club's Sox Talk program. During the 1989-90 off-season he played centerfield for the Winter Haven Super Sox in the Senior Professional Baseball Association.

Bumbry was named a Red Sox minor league coach specializing in outfield play and baserunning in January 1986. He ended a 13-year M.L. career in 1985. He spent 12 seasons with Baltimore, then finished in 1985 with San Diego where he hit .200 (19-95) in 68 games.

Al had a .281 career avg. (1,422-5,053) in 1,496 games with 254 stolen bases. He holds the Orioles' career stolen base record (252) and is 6th on their all-time hit list (1,403). Bumbry won the A.L. Rookie of the Year Award in 1973, and in 1980 he became the 1st Oriole to have 200 hits in a season. Al served 11 months in Vietnam as a platoon leader, earned a Bronze Star and was discharged as a 1st lieutenant in May 1971. He is very active in numerous charities in the Maryland area. In 1987 Bumbry was inducted into the Baltimore Orioles' Hall of Fame.

RICHARD PAUL (RICK, ROOSTER) BURLESON #7

Age: 40; Born: April 29, 1951, Lynwood, CA. Ht.: 5-10; Wt.: 165. Hazel eyes, Brown hair. Bats and Throws: Right. Home: La Habra Heights, CA. Married: Karen Crofoot. Children: James Tyler 10/21/77, Chad 11/17/80, Kyle 3/5/83, Lauren 8/21/86.

Burleson was one of the most popular Red Sox players during the 1970s. In 1992 he has returned as the club's hitting instructor after 11 years in three other organizations. Rick spent the past three years with Oakland, including 1991 as their major league hitting instructor. In 1989 he was a roving minor league infield instructor, and in 1990 he moved into the Athletics scouting department where he was assigned to cover Orange County in the Southern California area.

The "Rooster" was the Red Sox first selection in the 1970 winter draft, after playing shortstop for the Connie Mack World Champions of 1969. After four-plus minor league seasons, Burleson joined the Red Sox May 4, 1974. He committed three errors in his debut that night but came back the next day with a HR, single and three RBI. He went on to compile a lifetime .273 avg. during a 13-year major league career with Boston (1974-80), California (1981-86) and Baltimore (1987). He earned four All-Star appearances, a Gold Glove in 1979, twice won the Thomas A. Yawkey team MVP award, voted by the Boston Writers, in 1979-80 and hit .318 (14-44) during two A.L.C.S. (1975 and '86) and one World Series (1975).

He hit .274 in seven years and 1,031 games with the Red Sox, including .293 with 194 hits in 1977. He made only eight throwing errors in 1978-79 and had a .981 fielding mark in 1978 that tied for the club SS record with Vern Stephens (1950) and Rico Petrocelli (1969). In 1979 he took part in two of the three Red Sox triple plays and committed just 16 errors in 811 chances. He followed that performance in 1980 by leading A.L. SS in putouts, assists, DP's (147) and chances/game.

THE COACHES

Burleson was traded to the Angels Dec. 10, 1980 along with Butch Hobson for Carney Lansford, Rick Miller and Mark Clear. A torn right shoulder rotator cuff suffered in 1982 limited Rick to 51 games in 1982-85, but he had a successful return in 1986 with a .284 avg. in 93 games that earned him the UPI Comeback Player of the Year award. He finished his playing career with the Orioles in 1987 and was out of baseball in 1988.

#35

Age: 38; Born: January 19, 1954, Littleton, NH. Ht.: 6-7; Wt.: 230. Hazel eyes, Auburn hair. Bats and Throws: Right. Home: Durham, NH. Married: Susan Knorr. Children: Christopher 2/5/82, Andrew 11/28/85, Alexander 9/11/88.

Gale made his debut as the Red Sox pitching coach in 1992. He got his pro coaching baptism in 1989 under Butch Hobson at AA New Britain, then moved with Hobson to AAA Pawtucket in 1991.

The 1991 PawSox led the I.L. with 49 saves and were second in fewest walks allowed despite using 23 pitchers, including 17 as starters. Gale had to continually juggle the staff, but they held together for a 79-64 record and a first-place finish in the I.L. Eastern Division.

In 1990 his New Britain moundsmen tied for the league lead with a 3.17 ERA and 38 saves, were second with 16 shutouts and tied for the second least walks allowed. Gale twice took the mound himself in 1989 at New Britain in emergency situations and allowed just one run in 5.1 IP. He had a similar situation in 1991 for Pawtucket and hurled 5.2 IP (4H, 1R, 1BB, 1K). In the fall of 1989 he went to Russia on the Eastern L. Diamond Diplomacy USSR Tour, then pitched for Fort Myers in the Senior Pro League.

Rich spent seven seasons in the majors with Kansas City (1978-81), San Francisco (1982), Cincinnati (1983) and the Red Sox (1984). He played in Japan with the Hanshin Tigers in 1985-86. He was drafted by the Royals in the 5th round of the 1975 June draft and had an outstanding rookie campaign in 1978. He was 14-8, 3.09 in 31 games and was named Sporting News A.L. Rookie Pitcher of the Year and to the Topps and Baseball Digest M.L. All-Rookie teams.

Gale signed with the Red Sox Feb. 24, 1984 after his release from Cincinnati. He was 9-5, 2.79 at Pawtucket that season and 2-3, 5.56 in 13 games with the Red Sox. He returned to his alma mater, the University of New Hampshire, to get his degree in 1988 and also served as the Wildcats pitching coach. Prior to being drafted by the Royals, he pitched three years at UNH (1973-75) and still holds the school record for most strikeouts in a game, 17 in 1973.

#34

Age: 61; Born: January 17, 1931, Cincinnati, OH. Ht.: 5-7; Wt.: 195. Green eyes, Brown hair. Bats and Throws: Right. Home: Treasure Island, FL. Married: Jean Carol (Soot) Bauerle. Children: Thomas 6/30/52, Donna 3/14/54.

Zimmer is back coaching third base for the Red Sox in 1992, a position he held for two and one-half years in 1974-76. He brought 43 years of pro baseball experience to the Red Sox staff, including 33 in the major leagues, 13 as a manager.

On July 19, 1976 Zim replaced Darrell Johnson as Red Sox manager. He went on to compile a 411-304 .575 record that included three straight years of 90-plus wins, 1977-79. Zimmer was let go as Sox manager with an 82-73 record and four games left in 1980. He went on to manage Texas (1981-82) and the Chicago Cubs (1988-91) with stops in between as a coach for the New York Yankees (1983 and 1986), the Cubs (1984-86) and San Francisco (1987). He was third base coach in the N.L.C.S. with the Cubs in 1984 and the Giants in 1987, and for the Red Sox when they went to the World Series in 1975. Additionally, Zim coached for Montreal (1971) and San Diego (1972). On April 27, 1972 he replaced Preston Gomez as the Padres' manager and held that position for two years.

In 1989 Zimmer was a near-unanimous choice as N.L. Manager of the Year by the BBWAA (23 of 24 first-place votes) after leading the Cubs to the Eastern Div. title. He became a minor league manager in 1967 in the Cincinnati organization, and after three seasons, joined Montreal as a coach in 1971.

Zimmer started his pro career in 1949 as a shortstop in the Dodger system. In 1953 he was leading the American Association in HR (23) and RBI (63) at St. Paul when he was struck in the head by Jim Kirk of Columbus July 7, and missed the rest of the season. In 1954 he began a 12-year major league career with the Dodgers, Cubs, Mets, Reds and Washington Senators. He had to overcome another injury when he got a cheekbone fracture June 23, 1956 on a pitch from Hal Jeffcoat of the Reds that again disabled him for the year while playing for Brooklyn. He was the Dodgers second baseman in the final game of the 1955 World Series, won by Johnny Podres 2-0 over the Yankees.

During his M.L. career Zim played second, third, shortstop, the outfield and even caught in 35 games for the Senators. He was selected by the Mets from the Cubs in the N.L. expansion draft in 1961. He ended his playing career with the Toei Flyers in 1966 in Japan. On opening day in 1960, his first game with the Cubs, he homered off the Dodgers Don Drysdale before 67,500 in the L.A. Coliseum. He tripled off Philadelphia's Curt Simmons in his first M.L. at-bat in 1954, and hit a two-run HR for the Senators in 1963 in his first A.L. at-bat.

In 1,095 M.L. games, Zimmer batted .235 with 91 HR, plus 2-10 .200 in 5 World Series games. He burst onto the pro scene in 1949 by scoring 146 runs with 63 stolen bases (10 of home plate) in 124 games for Hornell (Class D, PONY L.).

Joe Hesketh

In the summer of 1990 if somebody told Joe Hesketh he would become one of the better left-handed starters in the American League the following season, he might have had a good laugh.

Not that he didn't have the confidence in himself, to the contrary. He did, but nobody else seemed to believe in him.

It was the middle of the baseball season, and the 33-year-old lefthander was sitting at home in Palm Harbor, Florida. He had been released by the Montreal Expos on April 25 after only two relief appearances. Five days later he was picked up by the Atlanta Braves and after 31 appearances, they cut him loose three months later on July 24.

"I'd have to say I thought it was the end. After Atlanta let me go I didn't think I was going to continue my career. I just felt it might be best for me to go on and try something else," he recalled.

Then the phone rang and Hesketh's career was re-born. He found out not everybody had given up on him.

The voice on the other end was Red Sox General Manager Lou Gorman. He was looking for a lefthander for the bullpen and had good reports on Hesketh.

Rookies

by John Grabowski

The odds are great against a player achieving stardom in his first season in the big leagues, but the dream still burns deep within the heart of every rookie who laces on a pair of spikes. To stick with the "big club," and go on to win honors as the outstanding freshman in the league, is a feat accomplished by only two of the 150 or so players who enter onto the scene each year.

Since an award for the top rookie was first given out by the Baseball Writers' Association in 1947, only four Red Sox players have won the honor — Walt Dropo in 1950, Don Schwall in 1961, Carlton Fisk in 1972, and Fred Lynn in 1975.

But the list of outstanding Red Sox rookies doesn't end with those four. In fact, if an all-star team of Boston rookies is picked, Schwall would not even be on it.

At first base, Dropo is the choice. Following an impressive 11-game cup of coffee with the 1949 club, "Moose" hit the floor running in 1950. He was the American League All-Star first baseman and went on to hit .322, and tied with Vern Stephens with a league-leading 144 RBI. His 326 total bases also led the circuit, while his 34 home runs and .583 slugging percentage were good for second in the A.L. Curiously enough, the player Dropo forced off first, teammate Billy Goodman, batted .354 in a utility role to lead the league in hitting. Two years earlier, Goodman had broken in as a rookie with a .310 average and 66 runs batted in.

The top performance at the keystone sack is of more recent vintage. In 1980, Dave Stapleton trailed only Joe Charboneau of Cleveland in Rookie of the Year balloting, leading the Sox with an average of .321, while stroking 7 homers and driving in 45 runs. Unfortunately, he never again reached those heights. His average dropped in each of his succeeding six seasons, bottoming out at .128 in 1986. Marty Barrett (.303, 3, 45 in 1984) and Larry Gardner (.283, 2, 36 in 1910) also merit recognition.

Competition at the hot corner is stiff, with players such as Joe Foy (.262, 15, 63 in 1966) and Glenn Hoffman (.285, 4, 42 in 1980) laying claim to the spot. The nod here, however, goes to Jim Tabor, whose .289 average, 14 home runs, and 95 RBI in 1939 were overshadowed by the remarkable totals put up by another Boston rookie. But more about him later. Some might question why Wade Boggs is not penciled in, pointing to his .349 average in 1982. The reason, simply, is that he played more games at first base that year (49) than at third (44). He did not become the full-time third sacker until the following year.

At shortstop, we find Johnny Pesky. As a rookie in 1942, he led the league in hits with 205, while finishing second to teammate Ted Williams in batting at .331. After missing the next three years due to the war, Pesky returned and, remarkably, proceeded to lead the A.L. in hits each of his first two seasons back. His batting averages were .335 and .324.

Catching chores fall into the capable hands of Carlton Fisk. "Pudge" won the 1972 Rookie of the Year Award, in a unanimous vote, on the strength of 22 home runs, 61 runs batted in, a .293 B.A., and a league-leading 9 triples. His leadership role behind the plate helped the club to a second-place finish, just one-half game behind the Detroit Tigers. Who would have thought that today, 20 years later, Fisk is still performing his brand of magic, albeit for the Western Division Chicago White Sox? Runner-up honors go to Sammy White, who impressed as a rookie 20 years before Fisk. White batted .282 for the 1952 squad, cracking 10 round-trippers and driving home 49 runs.

Outstanding freshman performances by Boston outfielders are plentiful, dating back to Patsy Dougherty in the A.L.'s second season. Dougherty batted .342 in 1902, the fourth best mark in the league. More recently, Dom

Ted Williams

DiMaggio (.301, 8, 46 in 1940), Sam Mele (.302, 12, 73 in 1947), Tony Conigliaro (.290, 24, 52 in 1964) and Carl Yastrzemski (.266, 11, 80 in 1961) have excelled. The picks here, however, are Ted Williams, Fred Lynn, and Mike Greenwell.

Hall of Famer Williams burst onto the scene in 1939. He led the league in runs batted in (145) and total bases (344), finished second in runs scored (131), bases on balls (107) and doubles (44), third in home runs (31), and fourth in slugging percentage (.609). He batted .327, and undoubtedly would have won the rookie award had one been in existence at the time.

Lynn did win the award in 1975, accomplishing something no one has done before or since. He batted .331, with 21 four-baggers, 105 ribbies, and league-leading figures in doubles (47) and slugging (.566). In leading the Sox to the American League pennant, he was voted Most Valuable Player, the only man to win the honor in his maiden season.

Third spot in the pasture goes to Greenwell, who debuted in 1987 following brief stints the previous two years. Greenwell hit .328, bashed 19 homers, and brought home 89 runs, while coming to the plate 412 official times. His numbers were overshadowed by Mark McGwire's 49 home runs, and Greenwell finished fourth in the balloting for the rookie award.

Despite Lynn's M.V.P. trophy, he was not the unanimous winner in the rookie vote. One player received one-half of a vote, thus preventing a sweep. That player was Lynn's teammate, Jim Rice. Rice's impressive .309 average, 22 home runs, and 102 RBI make him hard to leave off our club, so let's stick him in as designated hitter.

A team with all this firepower is sure to win its share of games with any sort of pitching at all. We'll limit ourselves to two starters and two relievers to complete our team.

From the right side, our choice boils down to two 20-game winners. The numbers are nearly identical for Hugh Bedient (20-9, 2.92 in 1912) and Boo Ferriss (21-10, 2.96 in 1945). The pick here is Ferriss, who tossed five shutouts among his 26 complete games, and hurled 264.2 innings. Bedient had more strikeouts in fewer innings, as the Sox won the A.L. pennant by 14 games. Ferriss' team finished in seventh place, 17-1/2 games off the pace. Dick Newsome won 19 games for Boston in 1941 to merit some consideration, but a relatively high 4.13 ERA eliminates him from contention.

RED SOX ROOKIES

The southpaw starter for our nine should receive no argument. The immortal "Bambino," Babe Ruth, compiled an 18-8 log for the pennant-winning 1915 team, allowing only 2.44 earned runs per contest. His bat comes in handy, too. In only 92 official trips to the plate, he led Boston in home runs, with four, and hit .315.

Our bullpen is manned by none other than Dick Radatz. "The Monster" broke in in 1962 with a league-leading 62 appearances and 24 saves. The six-foot, six-inch righthander struck fear into the hearts of opposing batters, fanning 144 in just under 125 innings. His left-handed counterpart in the pen is Albert Walter "Sparky" Lyle, who first saw the light of big league day in 1967. Although he appeared in only 27 games, Lyle gave indication of things to come by notching 5 saves and posting a 2.28 ERA in 43.1 IP of work.

Well, there you have it. Fourteen Red Sox who beat the odds and went on to star in their rookie big league campaigns. Only time will tell if anyone currently toiling in the minors will someday supplant one of the above players.

But even if they don't, the numbers posted by these Red Sox rookies will always stand out among the top first-year performances in big league history.

The Dream Builds

by Saul E. Wisnia

The promise of spring had gone unnoticed. The Boston Red Sox, perennial losers, began 1967 with a fiery new manager in Dick Williams and a refreshing style of play. Most experts still felt the youthful group had no chance, and even a 14-12 exhibition record failed to impress the Las Vegas oddsmakers. The Sox were a 100-1 shot, expected to provide a little excitement and not much else.

But something set this team apart from the ninth-place finishers that preceded it. Young veterans Carl Yastrzemski, Jim Lonborg and Tony Conigliaro were sick of losing, and Williams had no intention of continuing the trend. When rookie lefthander Billy Rohr came within one pitch of a no-hitter in his major league debut April 14, it was the first sign something special was about to happen.

An Impossible Dream.

It didn't happen overnight. Following Rohr's masterpiece, the Sox were quickly deflated in a 1-0 loss to Mel Stottlemyre. Next was a 7-6 setback in 18 innings during which Boston blew 13 chances to knock in the winning run from second or third. First baseman George Scott, an All-Star in '66, now battling to keep his weight down and job intact, went 1-for-8, missed a "take" sign on a 3-0 pitch, and received a $50 fine from Williams.

Dick was fuming. The team flew to Chicago following the game, arrived past midnight, but was on the field for an early workout the next day. Stating that, "Talking with Scott is like talking to cement," Williams benched the .185 hitter in favor of Tony Horton. Horton fielded abysmally in another Boston loss, and third baseman Joe Foy (.083 and 10 pounds overweight) was seated next. Foy took to fasting, and veteran columnist Harold Kaese of the Globe offered advice: "The Sox are a long way from being perfect, and nobody — especially Williams — should expect them to be perfect."

Fans worried for his sanity, but Dick proved the perfect manager for this club. The Sox were youthful (average age 24), impressionable, and far from rich. Foy had been playing 25 months straight, including two winters in the Caribbean, simply because he needed the money. "If I stayed at home, I'd work from 8 to 5 for $75 a week," he said. "Down there I play four or five games a week and get a better paycheck."

Shortstop Rico Petrocelli was making $9000, and agonized over putting a down payment on a house. Reliever John Wyatt had all his money tied up in real estate ventures. Rookie Reggie Smith knew things would improve following a .162 start — if only he could raise enough to move his wife to Boston. The team payroll was $850,000 (topped by Yastrzemski's $58,000), but most fans couldn't care less.

Only Rohr's numbers made headlines. A $500 raise following his near-gem raised his salary to $7000, and a guest spot on Ed Sullivan brought another $500. The fame was fleeting. Billy went the distance in winning his next start, but after several poor outings, was gone to Toronto by June — never to win another game in the majors. A classic one-month wonder, Rohr's moment of glory had catapulted an entire team of over-achievers.

In Washington, Frank Howard hit a homer off Boston's Dennis Bennett that traveled 480 feet, but the Red Sox scored the winning runs when Mike Andrews hit a 90-foot drive that bounced off first baseman Ken Harrelson's knee into foul territory. Trailing Kansas City in the 15th inning, they prevailed 11-10 on a pinch-single by weak-hitting Jose Tartabull. The Sox were playing a brand of baseball not seen at Fenway Park for years, and finished April 8-6, in 3rd place, one game behind Detroit.

May began less promisingly, as a team-wide slump prompted nine losses in 12 games. Surprising nobody, Williams made more shake-ups. Declaring "I don't care how much they're earning, I'm trying to win ball games," he benched the slipping Yastrzemski and put third-stringer George Thomas in left against the Twins. When Thomas was forced to leave the game with a dislocated finger, Tartabull helped start the final rally of a 9-5 victory.

The next day, Williams announced he was sitting Conigliaro and Smith for a doubleheader against Kansas City. Petrocelli was now the only player not benched in the first 20 games. "I'm here to win," said Dick. "Not to see how many friends I can make." Williams later changed his mind on Conigliaro, and Tony responded by hitting a three-run homer.

Success grew contagious. Winning the second game of a doubleheader sweep over Detroit a few days later, Jose Santiago threw 147 pitches and hit three others for a homer, double, and sacrifice fly. "What do you want to talk about?" the smiling Santiago asked reporters, "My hitting or my pitching?" The Sox gained no ground on first-place Chicago, but moved from eighth place to third in one afternoon.

FENWAY PARK

1912 - 1992

“NO HOME RUN PARADISE”

by Ed Walton

For years Red Sox fans have been led to believe that Fenway Park is a home run hitter's paradise. There may have been years when this was true, but a closer look at the record gives us a different perspective. The fact that the venerable old Boston landmark was not especially friendly to Red Sox batters until the 1920s, when the live ball era descended upon baseball, is often overlooked by baseball historians. There has also been, since the erection of the “600” Club and the new press box behind home plate, a noticeable drop in home run production. The theory most often put forth for this is the change the addition made in the out-blowing wind currents over the field.

When the scoreboard was erected in center field, similar wind shift effects occurred, and the then centerfielder, Fred Lynn, found it took him the early season period to adjust to the new pattern of wind flow.

Fenway opened in 1912, and while it was accepted as the latest in ballpark design, it was not the most spacious park in the American League. Even though the present bullpens in right field were missing, and there was greater open space in the triangle area of center field, it was not the largest of major league parks. There was the famous “Duffy’s Cliff” in left field — a rather steep embankment in front of the left-field wall.

In the dead ball era, a number of the home runs were of the inside-the-park variety and naturally were hit in the parks with the more spacious outfields. Until Babe Ruth came along, many of the Sox homers were hit on the road, although it is uncertain how many went "over the fence." It was also true that as large overflow crowds filled the ballparks, fans were allowed on the fields behind roped-off areas. Various ground rules were in effect, and balls hit "over the ropes" and into the crowds were valued as doubles, triples, or home runs depending upon the local rules.

As testimony to the often crowded field conditions, Smokey Joe Wood, the Sox ace pitcher of the 1912 championship team, told me many times of his famous pitching duel with the great Walter Johnson of the Washington Senators and how the crowds surrounded him as he took his warm-up pitches just outside the dugout area. It was the custom then that the starting pitchers warmed up close by the stands in the home plate area. Many readers will recall seeing the well publicized photo of Joe Wood warming up surrounded by the crowd. It was at that famous game that the benches were moved close by the foul lines so the crowd could stand behind them.

In all, the 1912 Red Sox hit 29 home runs, 10 of them coming at home. Among the 10 was Hugh Bradley's of April 26 off Philadelphia's Lefty Russell, a seventh-inning blast over the wall with two teammates aboard. It was Fenway Park's first home run. Hall of Famer Tris Speaker tied Philadelphia's Home Run Baker for the league lead with 10 round trippers, four of which were hit at Fenway. The previous season the Sox had hit 20 home runs at their old home field on Huntington Ave., and 35 overall. The Huntington Ave. Grounds had a more spacious outfield.

In 1913 the home run output dropped to just 17, but of those only 3 came at Fenway. Harry Hooper, Heinie Wagner and Clyde Engle were the lucky trio. The 1914 club was one better, clouting 18 circuit smashes, but again only 3 were hit at Fenway — Larry Gardner, Olaf Henriksen, and Del Gainor accomplished the feat, the last two coming on October 6 and 7 at the tail end of the season. Can you imagine only six home runs at Fenway in two years?

The 1915 World Champion Red Sox saw their homer production drop to only 14, however, their Fenway production curiously almost doubled as five round trippers found their way out of the park. Two of the five were hit by pitchers Joe Wood and Babe Ruth. The season also marked Babe's first ever major league home run, that coming as he led off the third inning at New York in the Polo Grounds on May 6 off Yankee righthander Jack Warhop, a long blast to right field.

World Champions again in 1916, their home run production remained at 14 with an almost unbelievable one hit at home. That's right, one Red Sox home run all season at Fenway. That shot came off the bat of Tilly Walker on June 20 against New York righthander Ray Keating in the seventh inning with no one on base. Walker, Ruth and Gainor all tied with three apiece to lead the team.

While the 1917 club didn't match the World Champions of '15 and '16 by bringing home the pennant, they continued the home run output at 14 — the third consecutive year at that count. This time only three were Fenway Park jobs with Larry Gardner, Harry Hooper and Babe Ruth capturing the homers.

The 1918 club brought another championship to Boston and broke the 14 homer cycle by garnering 15 circuit clouts for the year, but did little for the home fans, as only two were hit at Fenway: Harry Hooper off Detroit's Bill James on May 16 and Jack Coffey off St. Louis' Al Sothoron on August 21. By now Babe Ruth was beginning to show his power as he had 11 of the 15 that the team hit.

Oh my, what happened in 1919? The Sox had 33 home runs of which Ruth had 29, a new season record for home runs. Besides Ruth, Hooper had 3 and Stuffie McInnis had one to account for all the team's homers. The dead ball era was about to end, and the lively ball was about to arrive. That winter Sox owner Harry Frazee sold Babe Ruth to the New York Yankees, but except for a dip in 1920, the Sox never again approached the low home run output of the early years at Fenway Park.

Bobby Doerr

by Dick Dew

Wore No. 9, 1937;
No. 1, 1938-44, 1946-51

THEN: In his prime he performed quietly and efficiently before millions of fans, compiling often spectacular statistics and earning the respect of those who watched him and those who played with him.

And while Robert Pershing "Bobby" Doerr played from 1937 through 1951, he is still among the top five in 11 of the Boston Red Sox career statistical categories, a feat that was recognized by his periodic selection as the best second baseman ever to play regularly at Fenway Park and, finally, for elevation to the Baseball Hall of Fame by the Veteran's Selection Committee in 1987.

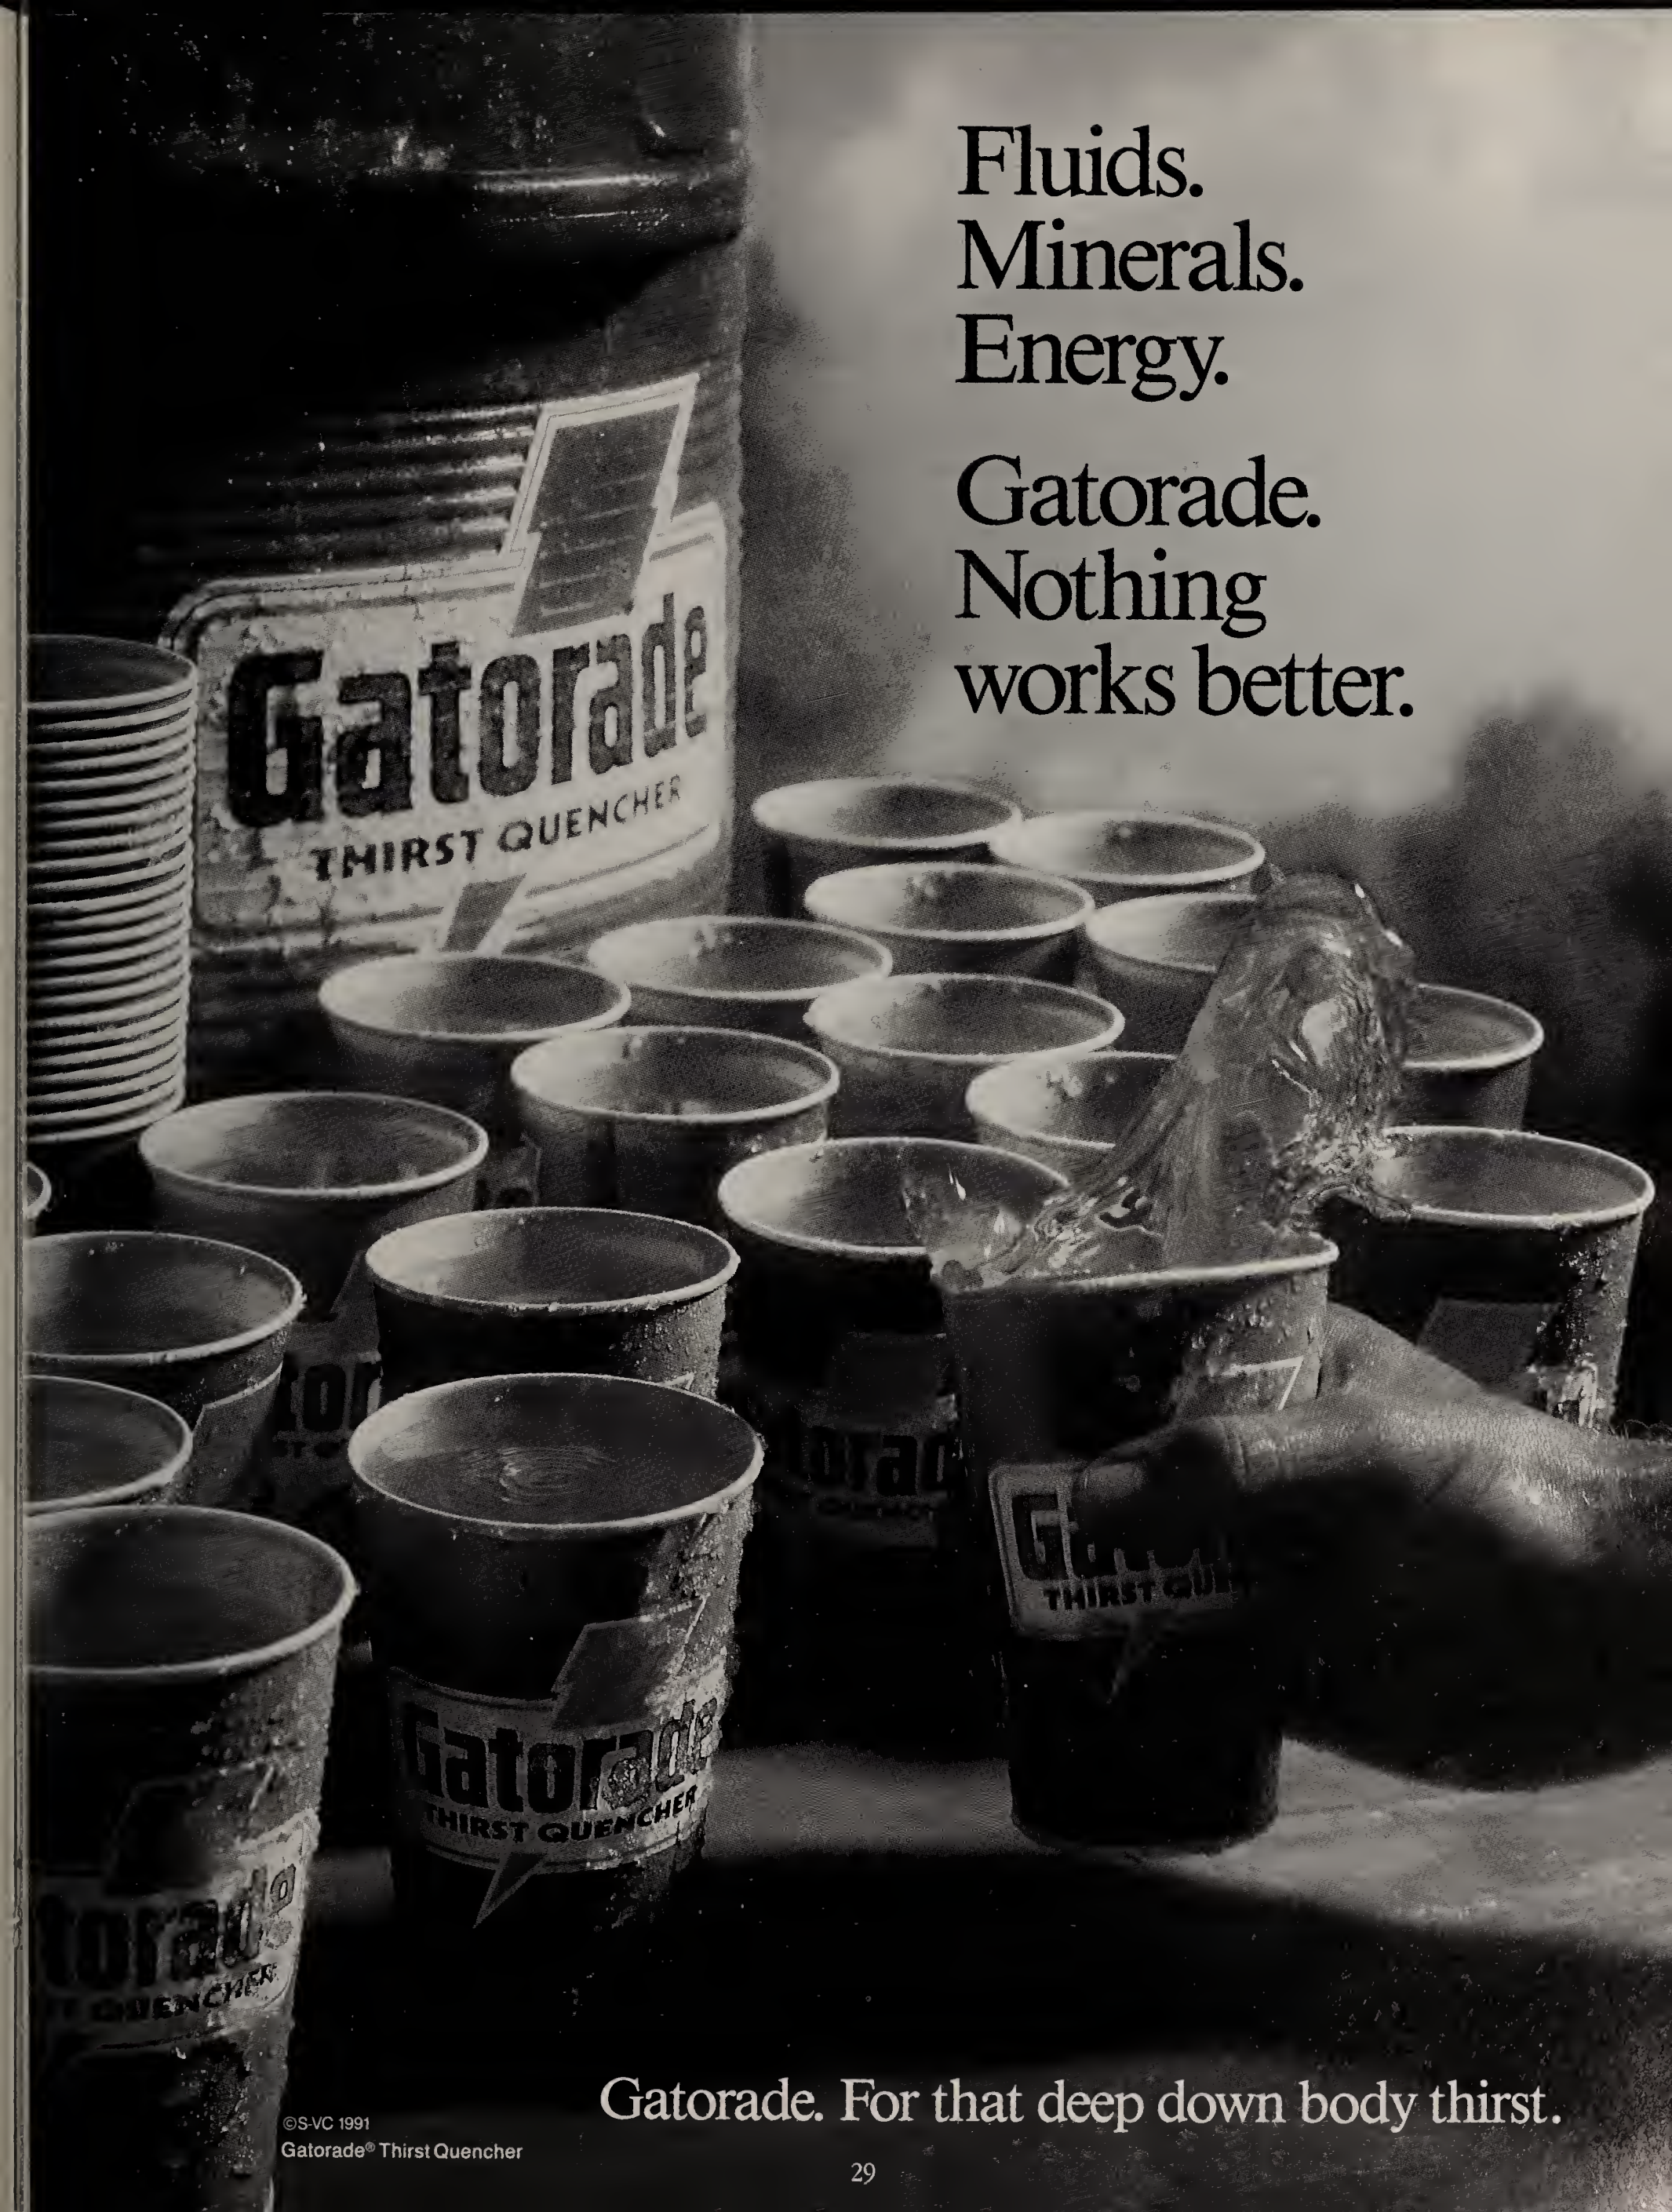

Doerr, whose playing career was cut short in his prime at age 33 by a back injury, batted .289 in 106 games with 73 runs batted in and 13 home runs in his final season as a player and still wishes he could have played more games in that painful 1951 season.

"They told me I needed a fusion operation and there were no guarantees, but that I could live a normal life without it. I had 14 good years with the Red Sox and probably my best season in 1950, so I decided against it."

Doerr, who played all but 13 of his 1,865 career games at second base for the Red Sox, retired with a .288 career batting average, 223 home runs, 1,247 runs batted in, 381 career doubles and an impressive 89 career triples. In 1950, he batted .294 in 146 games with 27 homers and 120 RBI.

Gatorade. For that deep down body thirst.

He was a nine-time all-star selection, a five-time starter, is still the club's all-time leader for games at second base, coached hitting for 10 years in Boston's farm system and worked as a major league batting coach for Dick Williams during the Impossible Dream year of 1967 and through 1969. He came back from 1977 to 1981 as a coach with the expansion Toronto Blue Jays.

NOW: A native of Los Angeles, Bobby Doerr was introduced to Oregon as a teenager by the trainer of the Hollywood franchise in the Pacific Coast League.

"He used to come up here with his wife during the off-season to spend the winter on the Rogue River. He'd show me pictures of fish and deer, so I came up to spend a winter with them.

"In those days, you had to take a boat up the river, there were no roads, and I liked it so much I have come back every winter since then. I met my wife up here, she was teaching in a one-room schoolhouse, we got acquainted and married.

"We have a home near Eugene, but up here (Junction City, OR) you can look in any direction and see nothing but mountains. My nearest neighbor is only 150 yards away, but for another neighbor, you've got to go a mile."

Doerr caught a 25-pound salmon to mark his 74th birthday earlier this year, and while he was on the river he saw a herd of 15 to 20 elk. Even though they have "three or four roads in here now," the area is still noted for its deer and wild turkeys as well as for the salmon.

If Bobby's love for fishing sounds familiar, it is probably because he was signed by Red Sox scout Eddie Collins in 1936 while Collins was visiting the west coast to sign another eventual Hall of Famer named Ted Williams.

"I had broken into the Pacific Coast League real young and played with some older players that had come down from the majors. I got a break and played second base, a position that I liked. Shortstop was the big position, but I always felt I was lucky the way it went.

"Being named to the Hall of Fame turned my life around. Now, there's something going on all the time. It is an honor that I never expected to happen, it's just something to be in a fraternity like that.

"I am perfectly happy to have been selected by the veteran's committee. It's the ultimate honor of my baseball life. Now, I go to two or three old timers' games a year, and I go to card shows to sign autographs.

"I still go to golf tournaments, though I don't play much any more. I think I've only played once in the last two years. The nearest golf course is 30 miles away. I enjoy fishing most."

MEMORIES: You can hear the emotion in Bobby Doerr's voice even today when he talks about the Yawkeys and Fenway Park.

"The first thing that happened when I got to Boston was Joe Cronin took me from the office into the back of the stands for my first look at Fenway. I had been in the Coast League for three years. I had never seen a major league park, and that was a beautiful sight.

"I kind of liked the style in Boston, it had a nice history, and the fans were exceptionally nice to me. I was always conscientious and serious, and I think the fans sensed that I was trying to do my best, and they appreciated it. Playing my career in Boston was one of the great breaks in my life, there was never anything adverse from the fans."

Bobby, who has to go to town to see any traffic these days, has one regret from his playing days. "The only drawback was that we never won a

RED SOX BROADCASTERS

The Red Sox Radio Network will carry every game, with Bob Starr and Joe Castiglione handling the play-by-play. WRKO-AM in Boston begins its third season as the flagship station of a network of 63 stations which blankets New England.

Castiglione is in his 10th season on Red Sox radio. He had previously covered

Joe Castiglione

the Cleveland Indians (1979-80-82) on both radio and TV. He also broadcast the Milwaukee Brewers on cable in 1981.

The Hamden Conn. native has also announced the Cleveland Cavaliers (NBA) on cable, and he did college basketball on New England Sports Network for six winters. Joe has also taught a broadcast journalism course at Northeastern University for several years.

Starr returned to Boston in 1990 after a 20-year hiatus. He had been the sports anchor at WBZ-TV (1966-69), as well as doing radio play-by-play work for Boston College football and the Patriots.

Prior to 1990, he was the television voice of the California Angels for nine seasons, and his baseball broadcasting resume includes the San Francisco Giants and St. Louis Cardinals as well.

Ned Martin
and Jerry Remy

In addition, he has broadcast pro football for the Los Angeles Rams, San Francisco 49ers, St. Louis Cardinals and Patriots, and he has called the play-by-play for numerous NFL championships. He has also done college football and basketball for the University of Missouri, Illinois State, Bradley and Illinois Wesleyan, and football for UCLA and B.C.

The Red Sox began radio broadcasts in Spanish in 1990. WROL-AM in Boston is the flagship of Carter Radio Network's five stations (also Hartford, Lawrence, Providence, and Springfield). Once again, all weeknight home games will be car-

Every Red Sox game will also be shown on television this season, with TV-38 carrying 75 games and New England Sports Network (NESN) showing 81 on cable. CBS will have the Red Sox on national TV five times, while ESPN will show four games on their Sunday night national broadcasts.

TV-38, along with its New England network, is in its 18th season of Red Sox coverage, with Sean McDonough and Bob Montgomery together for their fifth season.

McDonough, in his fifth year as play-by-play man for the Red Sox, is regarded nationally as one of the best in his field. This past February he was in Albertville, France covering the Olympics for CBS, announcing the luge and bobsled events. Also this past off-season again found him on ESPN extensively doing both college football and basketball. He announced Hockey East games for NESN and TV-38 for six winters.

In addition, Sean has been a studio host for the Red Sox on NESN, the Bruins

THE IMPOSSIBLE DREAM

PART II

The government intervened when Conigliaro left in mid-May for two weeks of army reserve duty at Camp Drum, New York. Before 1967 ballplayers could fulfill military duties in the off-season, but increasing casualties in Vietnam and subsequent pressure at home meant call-ups now came at any time. In addition to Tony, Dalton Jones and Lonborg were expected to see duty sometime during the summer.

Boston survived Tony's absence thanks to a variety of heroes. Scott became more patient at the plate, steady Dalton Jones spelled the slumping Foy at third, and Yastrzemski's hitting and fielding reached a new level. In one four-game series with Cleveland, the Sox came from behind in each contest — winning three of four. The pitching remained surprisingly consistent.

When Lonborg and Co. finally slumped, it was frightening — 56 runs allowed in six games, including 17 home runs. The worst came May 17, when Baltimore hit seven homers (four in the seventh) on the way to a 12-8 win. The crisis eventually passed, and when Lonnie recorded a clutch 1-0 win in Detroit May 24, the Sox were back over .500.

There was no denying Williams' impact. By May's end Boston had 25 stolen bases, on pace to steal 100 for the first time since 1934. Double steals and hit-and-run plays were part of Dick's game, as was the suicide squeeze — already successful three times. The team earned run average of 3.40 was its lowest since the pennant year of 1946.

June began with a shutout loss to Minnesota and dreaded Dean Chance (remember that name), but things quickly improved. Lonborg took a no-hitter into the eighth at Cleveland June 2, broken when .175-hitting Duke Sims doubled with one out into the right-field stands. Jim (now 7-1) settled for a three-hitter and 2-1 victory. Immediately following the game, the Sox announced a trade: aging reliever Don McMahon and minor league righty Rob Snow to the White Sox for infielder Jerry Adair.

A scrappy utilityman capable of playing short, second, or third, Adair, 30, was expected to provide infield insurance. He proved much more, starting most of the second half and batting a career-high .291 for Boston. Fifteen minutes after losing to the Indians the following night, the Sox made their second trade in as many days getting Cleveland starter Gary Bell in exchange for Horton and veteran outfielder Don Demeter.

Williams called Bell immediately to tell him he was starting in Chicago the following Wednesday, and Gary was overjoyed. Horton, believing he never got his chance in Boston, took the move much harder. By trading a player of Tony's potential (a .300 hitter but a poor fielder), Williams had shown his toughness again. Like most of his moves, it paid off.

A wily veteran and former all-star, Bell immediately gave the Sox a boost with wins in his first two starts. No longer under pressure from Horton, Scott began hitting better than ever. Yaz heated up, an 11 for 22 streak hiking his average to .322. His homer and RBI totals also among baseball's best, it looked like Carl was finally having the year fans had waited for from the heir to Ted Williams.

Despite such heroics, the Sox hovered around .500 for several weeks. Then came the turning point — an extra-inning affair with the White Sox June 15 at Fenway. Chicago scored in the 11th to break a 0-0 tie, but with two outs in the bottom of the inning, Conigliaro hit a 3-2 pitch for a two-run homer into the net. Tony ran out the game-winner in his traditional head-down manner, and when he looked up after rounding third, he could only grin.

Jerry Adair's presence added versatility and a solid .291 batting average.

The entire team was waiting for him at home plate, and the crowd (including his father Sal) was screaming as if the World Series had just been won. Tony leaped up and down the rest of the way home.

The Globe's Larry Birtwell called it "a night to remember," and like Rohr's one-hitter, it proved a pivotal moment for the team. They were now 30-28, over .500 to stay. If Rohr's effort had given fans a glimpse, Tony's homer made them believers.

The Sox lost a doubleheader the next night, but then went 7-4 the remainder of the month. Against this exciting backdrop, owner Tom Yawkey shocked New England by announcing in late June he would move the Red Sox unless he could find a new stadium to play in. He was sick of losing money, and a modern park with more seating and better parking might help him clear a profit. "This is not a threat," Yawkey told Will McDonough of the Globe. "It is merely a fact." Asked if the Red Sox would still be playing at Fenway in 5 years, Yawkey answered simply: "No."

Talks continued into July, political and business leaders lending their support. Possible stadium sites included East Boston and Newton, with the most serious bid a $26 million, 52,000-seat complex that could also house the homeless Boston Patriot football club. Little did Yawkey know what was about to transpire at Fenway.

It's Easy to Keep Score

Baseball Shorthand, as used by the news media to render every game more enjoyable to baseball enthusiasts. All players are numbered and all plays recorded by symbols. For symbols and example of system, see below.

CODE NUMBER OF PLAYERS AS FOLLOWS

Pitcher	1	Second Baseman	4	Left Fielder	7
Catcher	2	Third Baseman	5	Center Fielder	8
First Baseman	3	Shortstop	6	Right Fielder	9

SYMBOLS FOR PLAYS

Single	—	Fielder's Choice	FC	Passed Ball	PB
Double	=	Hit by Pitcher	HP	Balk	BK
Triple	≡	Wild Pitch	WP	Struck Out	K
Home Run	≡≡	Stolen Base	SB	Base on Balls	BB
Reached base on error	E	Sacrifice	SAC	Force Out	FO

The lower lefthand corner of the scoring block should be considered as home plate. Progress is counter-clockwise with progress to first base indicated in lower righthand corner, to second in upper righthand corner, to third in upper lefthand corner and to home in lower left. In example to left, batter reached first on an error by the second baseman, stole second, went to third on a wild pitch and scored on a passed ball. It is convenient to encircle all runs as shown so that scoring plays may be seen at a glance.

FENWAY PARK GROUND RULES

FENWAY PARK CODE OF CONDUCT

Welcome to friendly Fenway Park, home of the Boston Red Sox. To preserve the family atmosphere and to ensure that your visit is safe, enjoyable, and memorable, please adhere to the following guidelines of behavior in the ballpark.

1 The following items are prohibited from entering the ballpark: beach balls or inflatable objects of any kind, alcoholic beverages, glass bottles, cans, or containers of any sort, and offensive articles or objects. No banners will be allowed into the ballpark to be hung or paraded.

2 Any person using obscene or abusive language or any other antisocial behavior offensive to those around them will be asked to cease this conduct. If the offensive conduct persists, those individuals involved will be subject to immediate ejection from the ballpark.

3 Fans are permitted to keep foul balls hit into the stands as souvenirs. However, fans must not go onto the field or interfere in any way with a ball in play. Fans interfering with play or entering onto the field will be subject to immediate ejection, arrest, and prosecution.

8 Persons not occupying the seat for which they are ticketed will be subject to ejection from the ballpark.

4 There are designated non-alcohol sections- Grandstand sections 32 and 33. These sections have been set aside and no alcoholic beverages will be allowed in these areas. Red Sox Security will strictly enforce this prohibition.

5 It is illegal for individuals to offer tickets for resale to the public. Failure to adhere to this policy could result in arrest and criminal prosecution.

6 Laws prohibiting consumption of alcoholic beverages by minors, illegal drugs, and disorderly conduct of any kind, including intoxication, will be strictly enforced in Fenway Park.

7 The throwing of any object in the stands or onto the playing field is strictly prohibited. Those engaging in such conduct will be subject to immediate ejection.

Red Sox Cooperate with Fenway Neighbors

The Red Sox reaffirm their commitment to cooperating with their neighbors in working out various community concerns. We encourage all of our fans to cooperate also by not littering, vandalizing or in any way disregarding the rights of the neighbors who surround Fenway Park. The Red Sox also urge all fans to use the parking lots in the vicinity of the stadium and to use private buses or public transportation whenever possible.

Please refer to the transportation map on Page 64 for further information on easy access to the ballpark. Thank you.

Folks around baseball were taking the Red Sox seriously. Oriole manager Hank Bauer named Yaz, Rico, and Tony C to the starting lineup for the All-Star Game, and selected Lonborg to his pitching staff. Jim celebrated with a 10-2 victory over Kansas City, but the team then suffered an excruciating stretch of close defeats that dropped them to fifth place at the All-Star break. After a 4-3 loss in Anaheim July 5 their record was 40-36 — with 18 of the losses by one run. The bats had fallen silent, and when Bell was clobbered by Baltimore 10-0 a week later, doubters speculated Williams was out of hunches.

Once again, it was Conigliaro who lifted dampened spirits. In the first inning the following night (July 14), Tony hit a homer so high over the Green Monster veteran observers could not recall a harder-hit ball at Fenway. Yaz added his own home run in the sixth (his 20th, tying a career high), and Lonborg got his 12th win. Williams wasn't out of luck — or hunches — at all. Taking a tip from catcher Russ Gibson that July 15 starter Gary Waslewski "had nothing," Williams had Jose Santiago warming up even before the game started. When Waslewski walked the first two Orioles and went to 2-0 on Paul Blair, Dick made the move to Jose. Two pitches later, Blair hit a liner to Foy at third to start a triple play. Santiago cruised, and the Sox were 5-1 victors.

So it went. Fans began buying tickets for September games, putting the Sox within reach of a one million attendance mark for the first time since 1960. When Boston took a pair from the Tigers (Yaz homering in each game), a writer asking Foy if he thought the Sox could finish in the first division was told: "Forget that. Why not go all the way?" A six-game trip to Baltimore and Cleveland began with a two-game sweep of the Orioles. Darrell Brandon and Stange then pitched back-to-back complete game wins over the Indians. The next day, July 23, the Sox swept a doubleheader behind Lonborg and Bell to extend the streak to 10 for the first time since May of 1951. A homer by Conigliaro in the first game made him at 22 years old the youngest major leaguer in history to

MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL IBM is an official sponsor of Major League Baseball

Even if it's gone,
it won't be forgotten.

Statistics have always been a big part of baseball. They not only sum up all the action on the field, they influence the strategy leading up to it.

That's why everything that happens in this and every other Major League Baseball game is being fed into an IBM Personal System/2[®] computer.

With the help of IBM PS/2[®] computers, Major League Baseball can record, analyze and retrieve information with incredible speed and accuracy.

And the IBM PS/2 computer that's keeping the records at this game is teamed up with IBM computers at Major League Baseball Headquarters.

The result: thousands of stats are now available to teams, press and fans faster than ever before.

So everyone can enjoy the game even more.

At IBM, we've helped Major League Baseball connect high technology with the high drive to deep left that's going... going...

RED SOX BROADCASTERS

on TV-38, and the Patriots on WHDH radio. The South Boston native is a graduate of Syracuse University. He began his broadcasting career with the Syracuse Chiefs of the International League (1982-84).

Montgomery has been with TV-38 for 11 seasons. He was a valuable reserve catcher for the Red Sox during his 10-year major league career. He signed with Boston in 1962 and came to the majors in 1970. He played in 387 games, including 62 for the 1975 A.L. pennant winners, before an arm injury forced his retirement during spring training in 1980.

Monty did a local radio talk show as well as some work on Red Sox radio broadcasts, prior to joining the TV-38 team in 1982. He also announced the Red Sox on NESN for three seasons (1985-87).

NESN is covering the Red Sox for the ninth year, with Ned Martin and Jerry Remy teaming together for the fifth season.

Martin has been announcing Red Sox games on TV and radio for 32 consecutive seasons, including the past eight with NESN. He began his career in Charleston, West Virginia, covering the American Association team there for five years. He joined Curt Gowdy in the Red Sox booth for the 1961 season and has been there ever since, working with 11 different partners in that time.

Ned has announced the A.L. playoffs on CBS radio four times, and also did the 1975 World Series on television for NBC. The Duke graduate is also an accomplished football announcer, having done play-by-play for the Patriots (1965), Dartmouth (7 years), Harvard (6 years), and Yale (2 years).

Remy, a popular player during his career in Boston, is in his fifth year in the NESN booth. His playing days were cut short by a knee injury, which forced his retirement during spring training in 1986.

The Fall River, Mass. native broke into the majors with the Angels in 1975 and was traded to the Red Sox prior to the 1978 season. He was the club's regular second baseman until the early part of 1984, when a serious knee injury effectively ended his career. He stole at least 30 bases in each of his first four major league seasons and hit over .300 twice (1980 & 1981). In all, he played in 1,154 major league games with a .275 average. He was an All-State second baseman for Somerset High School in 1970.

For the convenience of its viewers, NESN rebroadcasts most of its games (usually that night at 11:00 and 9:00 a.m. the next day). NESN also offers Red Sox Digest, a 30-minute pre-game show, and Red Sox Weekly, a review of all the action from the previous week.

world series. I was fortunate, I was on all-star teams and I played in one world series (1946) and coached in another (1967). (He batted .409 to lead the Red Sox in the series with the Cardinals.)

Bobby's son works for an accounting firm but had a brief fling as a baseball pitcher." He played for the University of Oregon and one season in the Basin League in South Dakota with guys like Jim Lonborg. He had a good curve, a major league curve, but he didn't have enough of a fastball.

"I have two grandchildren, my granddaughter Mischel plays softball for the University of Minnesota. I called her the other day and found out she had a couple of hits in the doubleheader," Doerr said with pride in his voice.

In a way, Bobby Doerr is happy that he didn't play in the free agent era. "I was always happy they didn't want to trade me. And it would have been hard to go play someplace else for a few thousand dollars.

"I was very happy with Fenway, it was a great ballpark to play in, especially from a hitter's standpoint. The weather was not extreme, and most important I always felt welcome there.

Red Sox With The Fans And In The Community

The Boston Red Sox announced their sponsoring of the A. Bartlett Giamatti Little League Leadership Training Center in Bristol, CT, a totally handicapped-accessible facility for physically and mentally disabled children. The Training Center which will be the international headquarters of the Little League's Challenger Division, will feature training and education programs as well as tournament play for over 500,000 boys and girls giving them an opportunity to participate in Little League baseball for the first time. The Red Sox are the first to support this endeavor.

Phil Plantier delighted many of the patients at the Veterans Administration Medical Center in San Diego when he visited and signed autographs on National Salute to Hospitalized Veterans Day last February 14.

On April 24, before the Red Sox/Texas game at Fenway, Red Sox players and coaches conducted the Red Sox/Boston Globe Clinic for 3,500 youngsters and parents. Here, Tim Naehring explains the fundamentals of fielding to the crowd. This off-field event was sponsored by the Boston Globe who advertised the clinic and purchased tickets to the game that were given to the winners and their guests.

Introducing The Sharp TwinCam.

With Two Lenses, It Does What No Single Lens Camcorder Can.

ONE-TOUCH INSTANT 12X ZOOM
BUILT-IN 62° WIDE-ANGLE LENS

Finally, someone has created a camcorder with distinct advantages. The remarkable TwinCam™ from Sharp.

The only camcorder in the world to build two lenses into one sleek, lightweight design.

The first lens is an exclusive wide-angle lens — to capture an entire scene, not just a part of it. The second lens is a powerful zoom lens — to catch small but important details.

Together, these two lenses let you combine wide-angle and close up shots in one frame with TwinCam's unique picture-in-picture feature. Or switch between the two scenes at the touch of a button, creating an instant 12X zoom.

TwinCam is even available with an LCD color viewfinder, so you can view in full-color while shooting. So why not move your videos to a new level?

RUM BEATS VODKA TO A PULP

We beat 'em, and we beat 'em at their best. We went to vodka's home field, their top ten markets. Then we went up against their number one selling vodka in a blind taste test.

The results were decisive. The smooth taste of Puerto Rican rum and o.j. was preferred substantially over the traditional vodka screwdriver.

So make your own taste test. And enjoy how well the lively character of Puerto Rican rum mixes with the refreshing taste of orange juice.

reach 100 home runs. His youthful success seemed to mirror that of his team.

On the plane ride home from Cleveland, it was announced something "out of the ordinary" was happening at Boston's Logan Airport. Players didn't know what to expect, and when they landed that night to a reception of 15,000 people, they couldn't believe it.

"Actually, it was kind of scary," Stange recalled this spring. "They couldn't get the plane into the airport, so they took us to the end of the runway, figuring we would be safe out there. They brought out the bus, and as we got off the plane and onto it, all those 15,000 fans got around the bus. For a minute there I thought they were going to tip it over."

Fans waited for hours on Jersey Street (now Yawkey Way) for tickets to an eight-game homestand, and the Sox responded by taking 5 of 8 from contenders California and Minnesota. Against the Angels July 27, the biggest Fenway crowd since 1958 (34,193) saw Boston erase a 5-2 deficit in the ninth on a solo homer by Conigliaro - after Foy smashed a two-run blast one out ahead of him. They won in the 10th on a ground-ball error after Yaz made two great plays in left field in the top of the inning. Trailing 3-2 two days later, Williams got pinch hits in the eighth from Norm Siebern (just picked up from San Francisco) and Jones to seal another victory before 35,469, the largest crowd in 11 years. The Sox were finding every way imaginable to win, and talk of a new stadium was quickly forgotten. Fenway Park was the place to be.

Entering August the Sox were still in second place, 56-44, two games behind Chicago. It was going to be a battle to the wire: Detroit, Minnesota, and California were also within five games of the top. Private first class Lonborg (serving his two-week reserve stint) flew in from Atlanta to pick up his 15th win August 1, and even seven losses on a nine-game road trip couldn't derail Boston's hopes. Contenders beat up on one another to keep the Sox from losing ground, and when Lonborg used another overnight pass to fly to Kansas City and pick up a 5-1 victory, Boston crept back to within 1-1/2 of the top August 9.

Veteran catcher Elston Howard (villain in the Rohr game) was bought from the Yankees, and immediately made an impact with his deft handling of the pitching staff. Williams was up to his old tricks, benching Scott against California for being two pounds overweight, even though the Boomer was hitting .343 with four homers against the Angels. Back home, New Englanders sat by their bedside radios listening in agony as two more one-run losses slipped by with Scott on the pine.

Players and fans may have hated him at times, but it was hard not to respect Williams. By the time the Sox entered a mid-August series with the Angels at Fenway, they were still just 3-1/2 games from the top. In the midst of an 11-game homestand, Boston hoped to make up ground on the White Sox, Tigers, and Twins. The bats were coming around, starters Stange and Santiago were on fire, and a kid named Albert "Sparky" Lyle had joined Wyatt in the bullpen with great success. The night before, the coveted one million attendance mark had been reached.

Thousands of miles away, numbers of a different kind were rising far too fast in Southeast Asia, and General William C. Westmoreland requested President Lyndon Johnson have 600,000 troops in Vietnam by year's end. Racial riots in Newark left dozens dead, prompting Johnson to form a committee to investigate urban violence. Massachusetts Senator Edward Brooke, the lone black in the senate, was named a member.

The world was changing, but the Red Sox were still in a pennant race. The same Fenway Park that two months earlier was the subject of demolition debate had become electrified with pennant fever.

On August 18, 1967, Conigliaro stepped up to the plate in the bottom of the fourth inning to face the Angels' Jack Hamilton. What happened next broke the calm warmth of the evening — and forever changed the course of a baseball season and a young man's life. Hamilton threw a fastball. It moved in toward Conigliaro's head, and the hometown hero froze.

Tony C was down.

A freelance writer from Brookline, Saul Wisnia was born a Tony C homer from Fenway the week the Sox broke camp to begin the Impossible Dream. He is currently writing a book on the Red Sox and Boston Braves as they co-existed in Boston during the 20 seasons from when Tom Yawkey bought the Red Sox in 1933 to when the Braves left town following the 1952 season. Entitled From Yawkey to Milwaukee, the book is being edited by Dick Johnson, curator at the Sports Museum and co-author of Ted Williams - A Portrait in Words and Pictures.

A GREAT IDEA FOR RED SOX FANS

“My Day At Fenway Park”™

Robin Samora is a woman who knows how it feels to pitch to the Red Sox.

Last year, she stood in the team's front offices presenting a unique idea - a personalized, full-color storybook about a day at Fenway Park. This year, the subject of her pitch, My Day At Fenway Park, shows every sign of becoming a hit.

Samora began warming up in 1990, when the idea for the book popped into her head at a Red Sox game. With over two years experience producing personalized children's books, she was certain that their customized format would be ideal for a tale about one of the country's most historical ballparks.

“From the start, we knew that My Day At Fenway Park had to be more than just a typical personalized storybook,” said Samora. “We added special customization categories like ‘Favorite Baseball Player’ and ‘Favorite Food.’ And we created a page that would specifically highlight the game's starting lineup and final score.”

Samora assembled a team, called Ballpark Publications, that soon discovered there was much work to be done. Every aspect of the book, from the production of its gold-stamped, red velour cover to the creation of the marketing plan had to be reviewed, analyzed, and agreed upon.

“Even at our very first meeting, we were faced with a major challenge - the story itself,” Samora continued.

“We wanted the story to include real aspects of a visit to the park, like stopping at the concession stand, but we also wanted a little of the history of Fenway. Plus we wanted some of the basic rules of baseball. Of course, it also had to be structured to allow personalization throughout. And all of these elements had to somehow be combined in a book that would be not just educational, but interesting and enjoyable as well.”

“The book offered us an excellent opportunity to not only promote the team and the sport,” explained Dick Bresciani, Red Sox Vice President of Public Relations, “but also to build loyalty among a growing number of young fans. And to do so with a story that is fun and informative.”

Today, order forms for My Day At Fenway Park are available within Fenway Park, as well as through local ticket and souvenir shops and Ballpark's 800 Number. And the response from fans to date has been loud, strong and widespread.

“Although most of our orders are from New England, we've had a surprising number of responses from places like New York, Florida, California, Texas and elsewhere,” said Chuck Conte, Ballpark's Vice President of Marketing. “I guess it only goes to prove that the Red Sox have fans all over the country. Actually, fans all over the world. In fact, we just sent an order off to France.”

And the people placing the orders are as diversified as their mailing addresses. According to Samora:

“We thought we were creating a children's book, but we discovered that people of all ages were responding. We had a husband who gave it to his wife for their 40th wedding anniversary commemorating a game they attended on their honeymoon. We had a second grader who brought the book to show-and-tell, which prompted his teacher to order it. We had a father who ordered a book for a baby that was only a day or two old. And we had several people who ordered books for September 28th, 1960 because they were at the game where Ted Williams hit his final home run. The diversity of the orders has been incredible.”

146,670 hits. And counting.

This year, the 2,106 baseball games played in the major leagues will yield tens of thousands of hits, walks, strikeouts, stolen bases, double plays and runs.

They will produce a staggering mountain of statistics that'll be chewed up and pored over by sportswriters, fans and teams alike. Over and over again, statistics will fuel not only official records and standings, but also good-natured arguments and the booming hobby of fantasy leagues.

Data covering everything from batting averages, stolen bases, and won-lost percentages to more obscure considerations like whether a team plays better on grass or artificial turf, or at night instead of daytime.

Ever since the first ball was thrown, measurements have been made on just about every aspect of the game, not just to establish current team and player rankings and correlate past performance with future success, but to enrich the lore and preserve the legends of our national pastime.

Needless to say, accuracy and speed in juggling these figures are paramount. What better endeavor to utilize the power of the computer?

So, five years ago, Major League Baseball and IBM embarked on a joint effort to create what is now known as the MLB-IBM Baseball Information System (BIS).

Now, from the very first pitch of opening day to the last play of the World Series, the results of every player who steps to the plate are recorded and analyzed faster than a Nolan Ryan fastball. (In fact, as of last season, we've logged 146,670 hits.)

Whether he struck out or singled. Whether there's a walk or a ground-rule double. Bases stolen or runs batted in. It's all entered by a representative from the home team working on an IBM Personal System/2® computer in the press box.

After the game, a complete report is printed out containing long and short box scores and complete year-to-date statistics as well as a play-by-play narrative of the game (by the time the reporters return from postgame interviews and in plenty of time to meet newspaper deadlines). Reporters have hailed the BIS an absolute gift.

It saves them endless calculations. And, with the accompanying narrative report of each game, it helps jog the memory in case anything was left out of their notes.

The postgame information is then sent electronically to a central host computer at MLB headquarters in New York. There, the larger computer, an IBM AS/400®, compiles the statistics, along with the data and statistics of every other game played that day.

Until the MLB-IBM System, many types of statistical reports were only available once a week or monthly, or not at all. Now, by 9 o'clock the next morning, the host computer makes available reports covering more than 29 categories (and growing) for all 26 clubs.

In addition to reports for all teams, individual team intelligence reports provide detailed performance data in many areas such as how pitchers perform in late innings or a hitter's ability to advance runners in certain situations or his batting effectiveness against righties or lefties. Today, this information is a vital element of managerial strategy, coaching help and even front office moves.

In total, the massive effort produces over 300 daily reports during the season and an additional 360 postseason reports covering 48 more categories.

It also provides online data for the press at the World Series and All Star games, and because it's instantaneous, BIS ensures reporters get up-to-date stats in the event of last-minute changes.

Finally, the system provides accurate statistics for MLB publications like the official League Red and Green books.

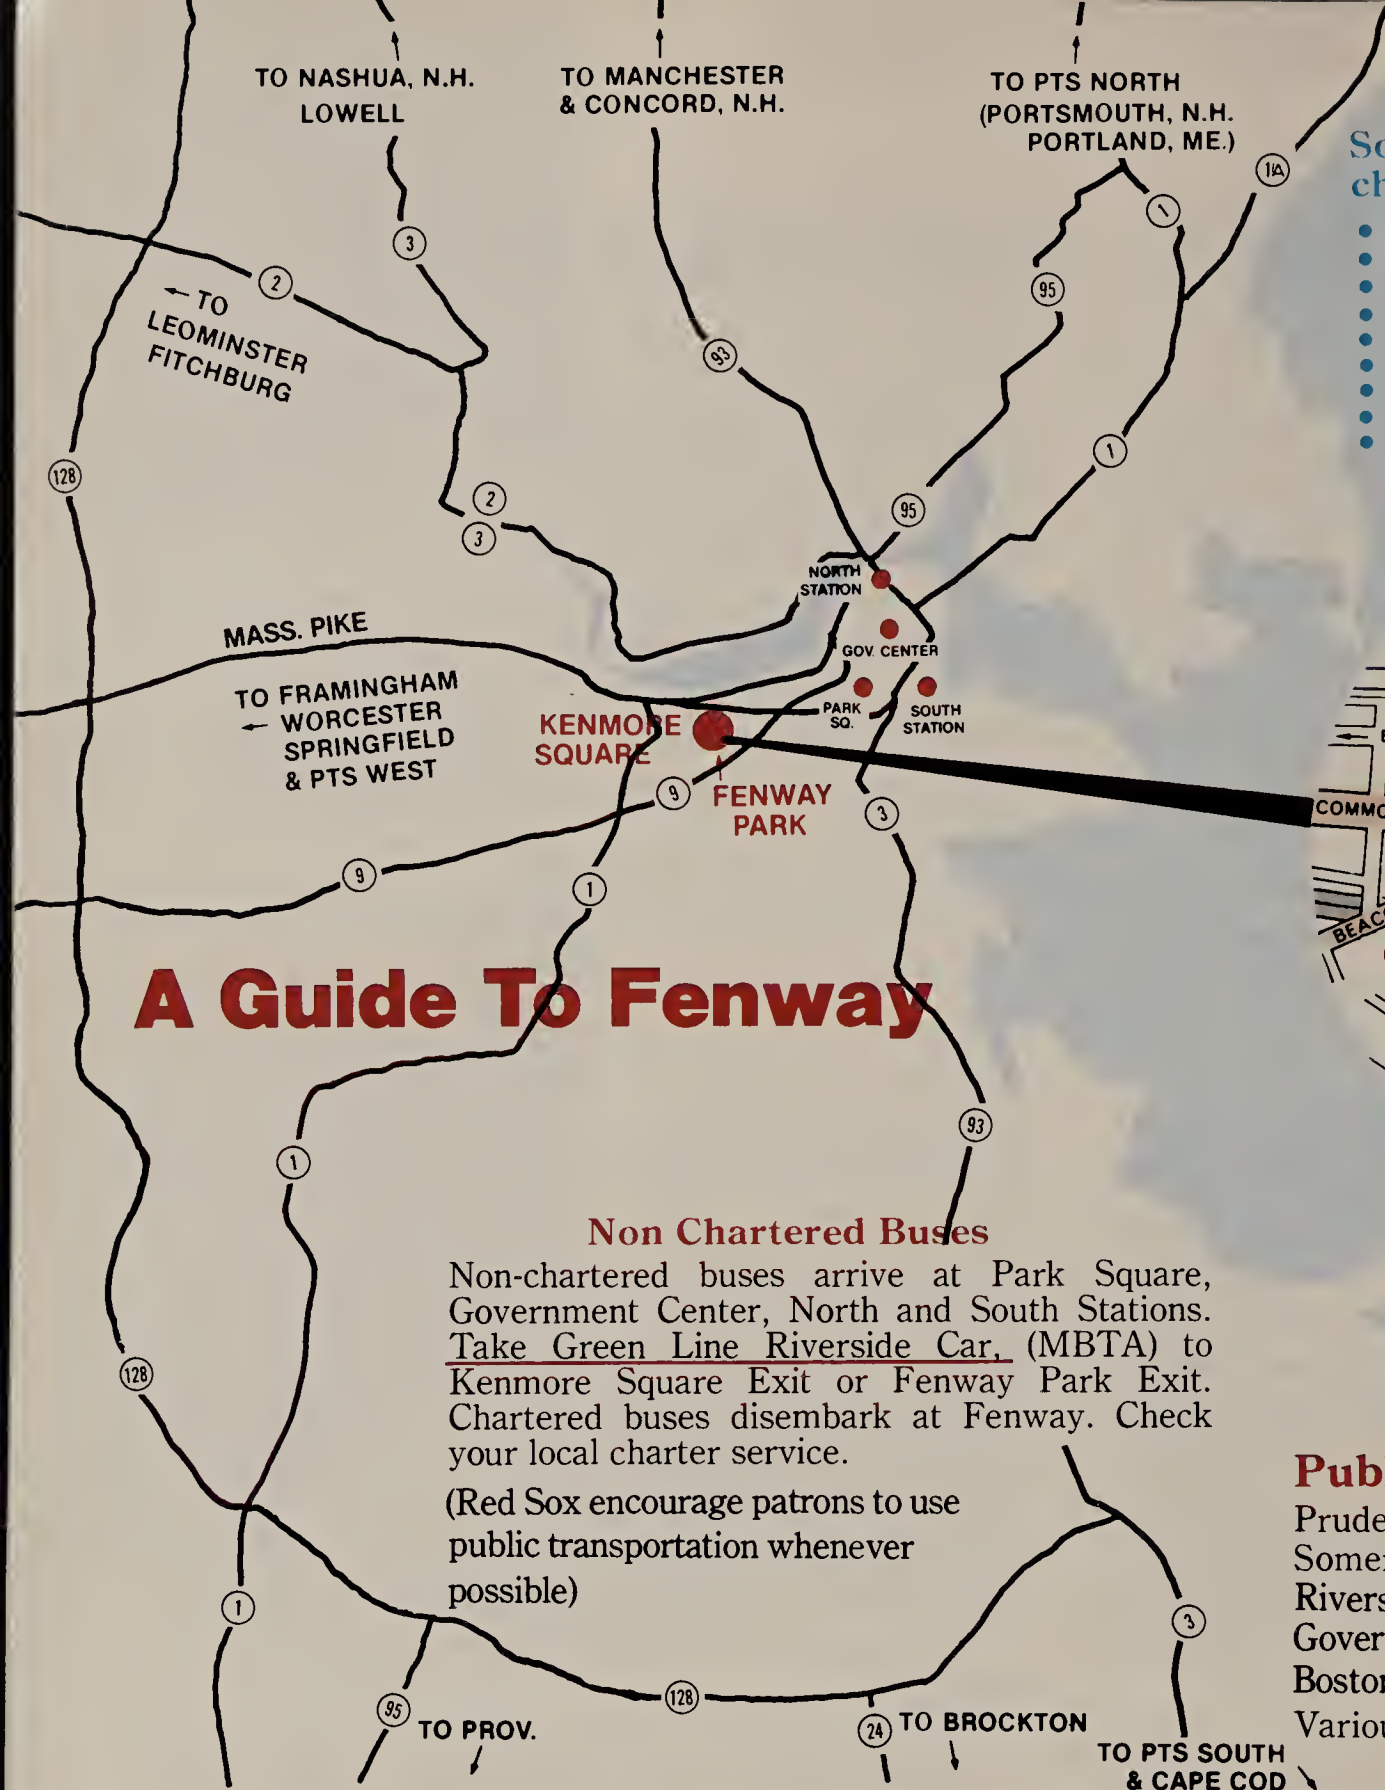

In a very short time, the MLB-IBM system has had a very profound effect on how our nation's favorite game is played and enjoyed.

And, while the importance of many contributions made to baseball over the years can never accurately be measured, happily, now there is something that can.

In 1952, the year the Red Sox established their support for the Jimmy Fund under the ownership of Thomas A. Yawkey, cancer was predictably fatal. Since then, the unparalleled support of Tom and Jean Yawkey and the entire Red Sox family has helped Dana-Farber Cancer Institute to make astounding breakthroughs in cancer research and care for adults and children.

Today, the young patients in the Jimmy Fund Clinic express heartfelt gratitude for 40 years of enthusiastic support that has enabled two out of every three of them to walk out of Dana-Farber disease-free.

"I got the call from Boston, they were in a pennant race and needed a left-handed setup man.

"I said 'what the heck, I've got two months left in the season, I might as well play it out, see what happens.'

"I thought playing in Fenway Park and pitching for the Red Sox would be fun. I didn't pitch badly (0-4, 3.51 ERA in 12 appearances, two of them starts), but when the playoffs came around, I knew I wasn't going to be on the roster. It was a numbers thing and understandable."

The Red Sox brought Hesketh to camp the next spring, but he didn't really figure in Manager Joe Morgan's plans.

Hesketh suspected this and decided if he was going down, he was going down firing both barrels.

"I had to reach down again and see what I had left in me as far as being a competitor," he said.

"I didn't want to leave the game thinking I was giving up on myself. So I said: 'what the heck, I'll give it one more shot in the spring, and we'll see what happens from there.'

"And knock on wood everything's been pretty good since."

Pretty good may be an understatement.

Hesketh pitched his way onto the team last spring and wound up having a season that exceeded even his wildest dreams.

He made 23 appearances during the first half of the season, 22 out of the bullpen.

Then, because of a succession of injuries, he got a chance to start, and once he got his foot in the door, they couldn't get him out.

He made 16 starts, won 10, only lost three and had an earned run average of 3.00. Overall he finished the season by winning a career-high 12 games and lost only four. His overall ERA was 3.29, and he led the major leagues with a .750 winning percentage.

The frosting on the cake came when he signed a two-year deal (the club has the option for the third) worth an estimated $3.5 million. From a $465,000 salary in 1991, he jumped to $1,775,000 this season.

Hesketh had severe shoulder surgery for an impinged nerve in his shoulder - an injury that sidelined him from July 3, 1986 until August 13, 1987.

When he came back he was a full-time reliever and pitched well in 18 appearances for the Expos.

He made a career-high 60 appearances out of the bullpen going 4-3 with nine saves. But disaster struck the following season.

"They were looking for good things from me, but things went totally the other way. It didn't work well, and it got to be an ugly situation.

"It was getting to the point where I wasn't enjoying going to the ballpark."

He thought he got a break when the Expos released him and the Braves picked him up.

"I felt if I got a chance to pitch, things might turn around for me. They gave me some opportunities as a closer, but as you well know, I'm not a closer."

Hesketh believes his arm came back to where it was before the surgery because he became a starter.

"Dr. (Frank) Jobe who did the operation on me said the best thing for my arm would probably to be a starting pitcher. That gives me four days in between to work on the muscles of my shoulder and back and pitch once every five days.

"The day after I pitch my shoulder gets tired. I take the day off, then hit the weight room the next two days, then take another day off. So far it hasn't bothered me.

"Starting pitching is my niche. I don't know if being in the bullpen was good for the type of surgery I had, getting ready in a couple of minutes.

"I think for me it was a matter of opportunity, and unfortunately for the team, we had a series of injuries and that put me into the starting rotation."

As a starter Hesketh strives for consistency.

"I want to keep the team in the game. I want to be a consistent pitcher, not a guy who goes out, has one good start then maybe two or three shaky ones, then a bad one, then a good one. I just want to be consistent."

The record shows he had been very consistent as well as very good.
